

Dr. Jane Clare Jones @janeclarejones

4 May · 6 tweets · janeclarejones/status/1389481904043343872

This is where this leads.

The utterly narcissistic drive to get right inside other people's consciousness and control their perceptions. B/c you want them to perceive what you want to be true, not what is actually there.

You people are the quintessence of fascism.

You could accept reality, and that people are being polite to you, and be okay with that.

But no, everything, from our words, to our social organisation, to our laws, to our very perceptions of basic constituent elements of the world has to be rearranged because YOU WANT.

And that is why you are so fucking dangerous. Because you go on and on and on about your authenticity, and your truth, and your journey, and you have not one single sliver of respect for the humanity of anyone else.

We're all just flat fucking mirrors there to reflect YOU.

Our minds, beliefs, perceptions have no place other than as a reflecting surface for YOU and YOUR IDENTITY.

And if we don't reflect what YOU WANT to exactly YOUR specifications, you want to reach inside our heads and recalibrate our consciousness so it serves YOU.

FUCK NO.

Interesting intersection with the other conversation I'm having right now...

The recognition of relational interdependence is the core of feminist thinking, which is why the totalitarian denial of relational dependence and trying to mandate other people's responses and perceptions is basically the greatest ever symptom of the patriarchal narcissism that structures trans ideology.

Entitled narcissistic relationality-denying mind-over-matter uber-dominating patriarchy on crack.

...